Dealing with a fine

If you get a fine and you were under 18 at the time we strongly recommend that you contact Youthlaw or drop into our Friday Fines clinic at 244 Flinders St Melbourne . There are a number of options to deal with your fine(s):

1. Pay the fine, ask for a payment plan or ask for more time to pay
2. Request a review of the fine or apply for the fines to be waived under the new family violence scheme
3. Elect to have your fine heard in court
4. Do nothing (read below- this may be your best option).

1. Paying the fine

You can pay the fine in full or you can contact the agency who gave you the fine (listed on the infringement notice) and ask for more time to pay.

Some agencies may agree to a payment plan but if you miss a payment, the agency may file a criminal charge in the Children's Court or refer your fine to CAYPINS (please keep reading for more information about CAYPINS).

You can also request a single payment arrangement with Fines Victoria (rather than dealing with lots of agencies).

2. Asking for a review

If you disagree that you have broken the law or if you are unable to pay the fine, you can write to the agency that gave you the fine and ask them to review their decision.

You should contact Youthlaw for more information and advice before you make a request for review. You only get one chance to do an internal review so it's best to have a lawyer assist you.

There are new laws in place to deal with fines incurred as a result of family violence.

There are also laws that can be used if you received a fine as a result of special circumstances (such as homelessness, a mental or intellectual disability, or serious addiction to drugs or alcohol).

There is also the potential to argue for your individual exceptional circumstances.

The laws can be a bit tricky to navigate. We strongly recommend you contact us to assist you.

3. Electing to go to court

You can elect to have your fine heard in the Children's Court as a charge and summons. We generally do not recommend this option to young people.

CAUTION: You may end up with a criminal record if you take this option so you should contact Youthlaw for advice first.

What if I do nothing?

If you do not pay an infringement notice by the due date, you will get a penalty reminder notice and additional costs may be added to the fine.

If the fine goes unpaid for another 28 days after the penalty reminder notice, the agency can refer your fine to the Children's Court CAYPINS system.

What is CAYPINS?

CAYPINS stands for the Children and Young Persons Infringement Notice System at the Children's Court.

If an agency lodges your unpaid fine with CAYPINS, you will be sent a 'Notice of Court Case (CAYPINS)' in the mail. The notice will give you a time, place and date when a CAYPINS registrar will decide what to do about your fine at court.

You then have the following options:

1. Pay the fine
2. Ask for more time to pay or request a payment plan
3. Ask to adjourn the court date
4. Ask for your fines to be reduced or an order that you do not have to pay
5. Ask to refer your fines to a Magistrate
6. Take no action

1. Pay the fine before the CAYPINS court date

You can pay the fine by mail or in person at the Children's Court or your local Magistrates' Court. If you pay the fine in full, you do not need to go to court on the date in the CAYPINS notice.

2. Ask for more time to pay or a payment plan

You can ask the CAYPINS registrar for more time to pay or a payment plan by phone, in writing or in person at court on the date in the CAYPINS notice.

3. Ask to attend court on a later date

You can telephone the court to ask for your CAYPINS case to be adjourned to a later date.

4. Ask for the fine to be reduced

If you want to ask the CAYPINS registrar to reduce your fine or make an order that you do not have to pay the fine, you should attend court on the date in the notice.

If you cannot make it to court on the day, you can contact the CAYPINS registrar to organise filling out forms. These forms are to help the registrar make a decision about your fines by giving them more information about you and your financial situation.

What if I disagree with the CAYPINS decision?

If you disagree with the registrar's decision, you can ask for a review by a Magistrate. You must file for a review within 28 days of the decision.

What can a Magistrate do on review?

On review, a Magistrate may:

1. Confirm you must pay the fine in full
2. Change the amount you have to pay
3. Order that you do not have to pay

5. Ask to refer your fines to a Magistrate

You can refuse to have your fines dealt with by CAYPINS and referred to a Magistrate instead, who has the same options as above.

6. Take no action

If you take no action, the CAYPINS registrar usually orders you to pay the fine in full. If the fine goes unpaid for more than one month after the CAYPINS registrar's decision, there will be a further enforcement hearing (see below).

Do enforcement orders or warrants expire?

Yes. CAYPINS enforcement orders and any related warrants expire after 3 years.

Will I get a criminal record for CAYPINS?

No. An enforcement order for a CAYPINS fine is NOT a conviction or a finding of guilt.

Children's Court Fines

Another situation where you might get a fine when you are under 18 is if you are charged and found guilty of a criminal offence in the Children's Court.

If you have a court fine, your options are:

1. Pay the fine by the due date
2. Apply for more time to pay
3. Apply for an instalment order (payment plan)
4. Apply to change an instalment order

Enforcement Hearings

If a CAYPINS registrar or a Magistrate in the Children's Court orders you to pay a fine and payment is more than a month overdue, the court may list an enforcement hearing. You can attend the enforcement hearing or the Magistrate can make a decision in your absence.

At the enforcement hearing, the Magistrate can decide to either:

1. Order that you do not have to pay
2. Adjourn your case for up to 6 months
3. Reduce the fine
4. Make or change a payment plan
5. Release you on a probation or youth supervision order for up to 3 months (unless you will be 21 or over)
6. Issue a warrant to seize your property

Will the Sheriff come and take away my stuff?

The Sheriff does not generally take action on warrants to seize property for unpaid CAYPINS or Children's Court fines.
